

By Jasmin Ramsey

Fifteen university professors have written a letter calling Canada's "Project Hero" scholarship "a dangerous cultural turn" that associates "heroism" with military intervention. There has been a recent stir of controversy in the Canadian media over a public letter signed by 15 University of Regina professors who oppose their school's participation in a scholarship program reserved exclusively for the offspring of soldiers who died in the war in Afghanistan....

For the complete article, published by AlterNet, please click here.