

By Chris Hedges

From Dandelion Salad | Original Article

Image by Private Manning Support Network via Flickr

RT America

On the show this week, Chris Hedges talks to journalist, Dean Yates, who thirteen years ago was the head of Reuters' Baghdad bureau. On July 12, 2007, Yates learned two of his employees – Saeed Chmagh and Namir Noor-Eldeen had been fired upon and killed by the U.S. Army. A war crime the U.S. military tried to cover up. Their deaths, and those of others, were the focus of the now-infamous video, Collateral Murder, leaked by Chelsea Manning and released by Wikileaks.